Subject contents	Specialist literary studies I: Poetry and History The course acquaints students with a variety of ways of understanding the concept of history, expressed in poems by twentieth and twenty-first century writers mainly from the British Isles. We also discuss poetic works whose theme is a historical event - not necessarily connected with the British Isles. We ask the question: what can poets, with their use of poetic devices and poetic language, bring to the understanding of history and historical events?
