Subject contents	Component topics: integrated skills course The issues discussed serve the purpose of consolidating and improving the lexicographic content specified for this level at the C1+ level. Vocabulary appearing in the texts discussed during classes and/or extra-text vocabulary, grouped into lexical sets for the purposes of discussing a given topic. Work on vocabulary, based on authentic or minimally adapted texts, including definition, analysis, and exemplification of vocabulary, as well as its practical use, both in separate contexts and in semantic relations (synonyms, antonyms, polysemy, collocations, idioms and expressions). Productive exercise of lexical skills in closed lexical tasks (lexical sets, word formation). Developing listening comprehension skills based on authentic materials and advanced textbooks at C1/C2 level. Ability to understand globally and to understand selected content aspects such as the main topic and side topics, the speaker's opinion and attitude towards the presented content, and directly communicated and implied content. Practicing the formula of open questions using summaries and paraphrases as well as closed questions (multiple choice questions, gap filling in summary sentences) in the discussion of the text. Work on improving the ability to understand written texts at the C1/C2 level, such as an essay, a journalistic article, a personalized text, a biographical text, a fragment of a book, both in its global dimension (reading for gist) and the understanding of more detailed their content including the functions of the text, the writer's opinions on the content presented, the meanings presented directly and implied, the social and/or cultural context. Deducing the meaning of words from context and paraphrasing them. Deepening knowledge of textual discourse through the analysis and synthesis of elements of textual organization (exemplification, comparison, reference), its coherence and cohesion, in tasks requiring textual reconstruction (cloze texts) and containing hints (grammatical and lexical cues). Developing speaking skills in terms of interactive and group competences (initiating interactions, exchanging information and views, expressing opinions) as well as monologue skills (summarizing and summarizing the content discussed, own and other interlocutors' opinions, presenting justification for one's own opinions). Monitoring pronunciation, both at the segmental and suprasegmental level. Component topics: academic grammar The aim of the course in the second semester is to work on deepening the understanding of the specificity of an academic text in English, with an emphasis on skillful expression of opinions using modal verbs and inversion for emphatic and nominalization purposes, characteristic of the formal language of written academic texts. During the course, the student performs analytical tasks, solves problems, works on the correctness of his or her own texts, and corrects sample works provided by the instructor. The course is based on teaching materials at level C1 +/C2 and other authentic academic texts. Component topics: academic writing Continuation of the analysis of the language of scientific texts: the distinction between everyday and scientific language, work on stylistic correctness. Making corrections. Structure of an academic text, coherence within the text, conjunctions and discursive markers, punctuation. Using university databases and internet sources; learning how to create a bibliography, mark text sources, create footnotes and endnotes; defining the concept of plagiarism; introducing ways of citing text sources in written work, paraphrasing and summarizing longer text fragments; analyzing, estimating and evaluating data; distinction between facts and opinions; learning to recognize discrepancies in existing data; getting acquainted with the patterns of correct reasoning and expressing thoughts in sentences (sentential logic); recognizing important relationships in the text; presentation and discussion of various functions of discourse.
