Subject objectives	The course presents perspectives on studying culture, allowing for a deeper exploration of the concept of identity and forming a foundation for better intercultural communication. Examples of understanding identity are provided by selected 20th-century cultural theories: structuralism, psychoanalysis, theory of symbolic forms, ludic concepts, dramaturgical approaches, proxemics, pragmatism, and theories of mass (popular) culture. Against this comparative backdrop, the culture of Scandinavia will be presented, highlighting its defense of its own identity and acceptance of multiculturalism.

Subject contents	Knowledge about culture has, since the 1990s, become one of the most important branches of the humanities, enriching and diversifying various studies by articulating the mechanisms of how culture functions in the contemporary world. The main areas of cultural critique in the age of globalization are caused by large financial corporations, commercial supermarkets, and the media. The lecture focuses on selected examples of contemporary cultural visions its current condition and developmental prospects, with an emphasis on critical aspects. The range of issues is vast: the role of symbolic elites in public discourse and the marginalization of elites in democracy; the cultural dimension of globalization: the deterritorialization of cultures; the dilemmas of multiculturalism; fundamentalism and nihilism as two responses to the disorientation of individuals in the culture of "liquid modernity"; the expansion of popular culture, the challenge of preserving high art in a world dominated by pop culture; the invasion and hegemony of mass media in contemporary culture.
