Additional information:
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> In order to take the exam, you must have a positive grade point average in each part of this subject (listening comprehension, reading comprehension, speaking, writing, practical grammar). Failure to achieve a positive average in one of these parts will result in the inability to take the PNJFR exam. The exam covers material from PNJFR I and PNJFR II subjects. The exam consists of various parts that test the student's level of language competence. The student should receive at least a passing grade in each of these parts. The final grade of the exam is the average of the grades received from all parts. Receiving a failing grade from one part is tantamount to a failing grade for the entire exam, and this regardless of the grades received from the other parts.

Subject contents	The program and the method of conducting the classes are the same as in PNJFR III. Only the themes of documents (recordings, articles, fragments of literary works) on the basis of which students will work differ. Listening, reading, writing, conversation: this time the emphasis is on topicality, materials are selected on an ongoing basis and allow you to follow hot topics and key debates. The main sources, also recommended for independent work, are the Internet edition of radio France Culture, especially the program "Répliques", the Internet version of the Le Monde daily (Le Monde.fr, débats tab) and the online ARTE television (Karambolages program). Students learn the art of oral and written argumentation. They read various press texts and imitate their style in written works. Students understand the ethical principles, technical requirements of informative texts and develop a critical sense in the reception of journalistic documents. During these classes, students learn various journalistic techniques used in traditional and digital press, from collecting information to editing various journalistic forms: reportage, investigation, interview, etc. A small part of the course can be devoted to creative writing workshops. During the classes they discuss and practice writing argumentative and synthetic texts. The thematic scope of the discussed phenomena and the developed vocabulary is wide and may change depending on the person conducting the subject. Additionally, specific linguistic and stylistic problems arising during the preparation of the final version of the master's thesis are solved.
Prerequisites and co-requisites	The condition for participation in classes is to pass the French Language III subject.
