Subject objectives	The aim of the course Introduction to Management of Cultural Organizations is to introduce students to the key concepts, structures, and challenges involved in the functioning of cultural institutions and initiatives in both local and international contexts. The course develops students ability to think analytically about the cultural sector and encourages active engagement in cultural life. Students will explore various models of management, sources of funding, methods of audience needs assessment, and the basics of strategic and operational planning. Special emphasis is placed on the practical aspects of cultural work, including project planning, teamwork, communication, and ethical responsibility. The course prepares students to take on meaningful roles in cultural projects and organizations, equipping them for future professional or community-based cultural involvement.
