Define and explain key theoretical concepts related to cultural identity, including representation, hybridity, performativity, intersectionality, and the subaltern.
Critically engage with major theoretical texts from cultural studies, postcolonial theory, gender and queer theory, psychoanalysis, and race theory.
Analyze literary and cultural texts using a variety of theoretical frameworks to explore how identity is constructed, negotiated, and contested.
Compare and evaluate different theories of identity, assessing their historical contexts, assumptions, and implications for literary and cultural analysis.
Reflect on their own positionality and cultural assumptions in relation to the texts and theories studied.
Formulate and support original arguments in written and oral formats that incorporate both theoretical and textual analysis.
Apply theoretical perspectives to broader social, political, and global contexts, understanding how literature and culture participate in shaping and challenging identity categories.
