Subject objectives	The main objective of the course is to examine the geography of the theatre imagination in one of the leading British theatre companies called Complicité. The lectures aim to depict the functionality of this concept in the aesthetics, and politics of the company. Some foundations of the course were established in my book Complicite, Theatre and Aesthetics but the lectures refer also to productions from the last decade. Initially, the founders of Complicité aimed to challenge the dominant logocentric theatre of the British Isles so that they were perceived at best as a marginal curiosity. Through time, Complicité has developed into a major point of reference for English language theatre-makers. Complicité not only contributes to the present shape of the English language theatre but is also decisive for its international recognition. The course ignites students to creatively respond to the geography of the theatre imagination that functions in Complicité

The local and cosmopolitan dimension of Complicité. 3. The founders and other leaders of Complicité. 4. Comment on the name of the company and its evolution. 5. Comment on Peter Turchis observation: Artistic creation is a voyage into the unknown. In our own eyes, we are off the map. The excitement of potential discovery is accompanied by anxiety, despair, caution, perhaps, perhaps boldness, and, always, the risk of failure.
