Subject contents	Historical games can increasingly serve as a tool in teaching history. Especially since they not only recreate important conflicts (e.g., the War of American Independence, the Civil War, the Vietnam War, etc.) but also address extremely important issues - such as slavery, the struggle for women's rights, and presidential elections. It is worth noting, however, that knowing the historical background makes it much easier to understand the processes that we recreate during the game. Hence, in this course, students will have the opportunity to combine theory and practice and learn about some aspects of US history through games, e.g. "Liberty or Death", "For the People", "Fire in the Lake", Freedom: The Underground Railroad, Votes for Women, Corrupt Bargain: The 1824 Presidential Election, Divided Republic, Bull Moose: 1912 Election Game, czy 1960: The Making of the President. Content:- Introduction to the game (mechanics, etc.)- Historical background: a) conflicts - War of Independence, Civil War, World War II, Vietnam War; b) slavery - history; life as a slave; abolition movement; heroes of the Underground Railroad; slavery vs. the law; c) women's rights movement - history; feminist movement; Seneca Falls Convention; organizations: American Woman Suffrage Association, National Woman Suffrage Association and National American Woman Suffrage Association; leaders of the women's rights movement; d) presidential elections - history; mechanisms - general election, electoral college; changes in the electoral system (e.g., Revolution of 1800); profiles of candidates in presidential elections- Games as reconstruction of historical events- The importance of games in teaching history
