Subject contents	Integrated Skills Course: Continuation of work on the development of lexical and grammatical resources, with particular emphasis on enriching the database of idioms, proverbs and collocations at the C2 level using, among others, multiple choice lexical cloze text and key word transformations. Further work on developing listening comprehension skills at C2 level using authentic audio/video materials; in particular, understanding the opinions of the speaker/speakers, which are the starting point for expressing and defending one's own opinion and discussing a given one topic. Improving the understanding of authentic written text at the C2 level, in particular understanding its functions and skillfully summarizing and paraphrasing the text, taking into account the implied meanings. Special emphasis on vocabulary and its use when discussing related topics. Further development of speaking skills through tasks enabling active exchange of ideas in pairs, groups and in the forum of the entire group. Work on improving 'public' speaking skills by preparing short speeches presenting the conclusions/opinions of all group members. Continued monitoring of pronunciation, mainly at the suprasegmental level. Rhetoric The course is devoted to developing selected communicative competences through discussions and dialogues, formal speeches and participation in public debates (demonstrative and expository speeches as the basic forms of oral expression), TED TALK-like presentations. These exercises are based on a specific vocabulary resource learned during classes on a given topic, e.g. everyday life, culture, social issues, AI and digitisation of life.
Prerequisites and co-requisites	Obtaining a pass in Practical English III at the end of the 3rd semester. Knowledge of English at C2 level. The condition for admission to the exam is obtaining a positive grade in all components of the subject. The written and oral examination includes: Integrated skills test: tasks at the C2 level, checking language skills, including text and non-text lexical and grammatical structures, vocabulary, reading comprehension, listening comprehension and the speaking test. The condition for passing the integrated skills test is to pass all components, i.e. Use of English test, reading comprehension test and listening comprehension test. Speaking skills test: a monologue on a given topic and its interactive continuation in the form of answers to questions about the topic at C2 level, using formal language. The condition for passing the exam is to receive positive grades for both parts: written and oral. Receiving a negative grade for one or both parts results in a negative grade for the entire exam. Presentation and discussion/debate skills are verified by continuous assessment.
